Cancer is really a group of diseases consisting down from 200 different types. Cancers are characterized by rapid and uncontrolled proliferation of cells in the body. The difference between types of cancer depends on the organ where the tumor develops, the type of tumor cells and various microbial processes.

As impressive progress in recent years in treating cancer is the notion of disease as a chronic disease. And as such the patient not only fought the disease but he and his family must be aware of their full therapeutic system and any possibility of economic or emotional support.
