

WikiRights goes everywhere

Who wants to know their rights?

The Underpaid

People with Disabilities

The Unemployed

Single Parent Families, Veterans, Anyone with Chronic Disease

Parents of Children with Special Needs (Learning disabilities, Autism...)

Anyone who Wants to Know about Tax Breaks

A grayscale photograph of a desk setup. In the foreground, a person's hand is visible, resting on a computer mouse. To the left of the mouse is a keyboard. Further back and to the left is a mug. The background is slightly blurred, showing what appears to be a computer monitor. The overall lighting is soft, and the image has a contemplative feel.

Is there anyone who does not need to know about their rights?

But, how would you learn about your rights?

Google!

But...

You get TOO MUCH information

It is written in legal language

It tries to draw you to lawyers or advocacy agencies

Wouldn't it be great if everyone could find all the information in one place?

In plain language?

For free?

Meet Kol Zchut: WikiRights Israel

A non-profit, collaborative project that provides information on social benefits

Last year we served more than 2.7 Million
unique users with 5,500 articles

More than 25%
of the Israeli population

We cooperate with 100+ government, non-profit and academic organizations including Social Security and multiple ministries

We operate with an annual budget of less than

$400K

and the equivalent of 7 full time employees (most of them editors)

We are proud of our accomplishments in Israel, and eager to extend the model to all democracies.
